Abstract

Methods and an associated apparatus are disclosed for providing fault tolerance for memory.  The method involves generating a remapping value.  Then the remapping value may be logically combined with the address value intended for accessing a given memory location to remap the bad address to an unused address.